TENANT HOUSE, Lower Marlboro Road, Sunderland Vicinity
Lower Marlboro c. 1900
Private

Tobacco, the crop which undoubtedly once earned the tenant of this house his livelihood, surrounds this abandoned frame dwelling. One single room stacked above another comprise the sparsely fenestrated structure. Trunks of poison ivy climbing to the stove flue top have started the deterioration of this quaint building.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Assuming that this house is on its original site, it provides a rather dramatic statement about the existence of those who earn their living through farmwork. This tiny one up/one down frame house sits in the middle of a field and at one point in the year, like its former occupants, is surrounded by tobacco.

There is a south entrance and a north entrance; the doors are windowless. On the first floor, there is a 6/6 window on the west side and one on the south side. These same sides have one 4/4 window on the second floor. The east facade is windowless, as is the north side. A single stove-chimney rises out of the roof on the east end.

Simple balloon framing and plain clapboard siding complete the simple plan.
